Summary

This research study is titled "Attitudes of Secondary School Children about the Ethnic Problem". Two Sinhalese schools, one Muslim one Tamil were selected as the research sites.

The methodology adopted was based partly on ethnographic research methods while other methods like individual interviews, and document analysis too were adopted by the researcher in an attempt to establish the validity and the reliability of the data.

The thesis contains nine chapters. The first four chapters deal with the socio-economic and educational context of Sri Lanka. The fifth chapter elaborates on the research methodology while chapters six to eight deal extensively with the data obtained from the research subjects. The final chapter contains the analysis.

This research study makes a significant contribution to knowledge in the sense that it is the first study that deals comparatively with the view points of children of different ethnic origins. As such it stands out as a pioneer study and opens up lot of scope for future researchers to take up various issues that are raised in this study.
